Stone Soup Nasty

Opening December 16th 2016

December 16 - January 16

created by Katherine Aungier, Jennifer Lee, Zuriel Waters and Steven Mykietyn

Look inside the cauldron- it shakes, boils over, alluring broths wafting of sweat. Super packed with paintings, this soup's pungent odor will have all the neighbors asking. Great new powers demand a sacrifice, art pieces are stirred up into a boiling soup, a creative new association, a STONE SOUP NASTY. So your split jeans, spliced dreams and combined ingredients create a strange mysterious flavor. Bring your stones for this soup of touching, caressing and making. This marker of something coming from somewhere spontaneously in which we exchange spells; in a moment recognised in its new owner's home for the test of time. Emerging from this experience, bolder and more confident spells- liberated by setting free the arts we have created. Cooks all sharing together these small works, these small stones.

*Four curious cooks sat down and spoke their spell of evocation, each summoning forth artists to contribute, a blinding spell
that draws forth small creations for exchange
Sharing in wealth your goods.
Afterwards we will eat and drink together
and share our tablets.*
